CHAMBER ENSEMBLE & ORCHESTRA

This versatile group of virtuoso musicians consists of leading UK instrumentalists, directed by the group's founder, Andrew Bernardi.

Members hold principal positions with London orchestras and three of whom are tutors for the Royal Academy, Trinity College of Music, and the National Youth Orchestra.

The orchestra is committed to the highest standards and has performed and made recordings at Glyndebourne and in the Barbican. The ensemble's players have active roles as educationalists and the group has worked in schools and with young musicians on major projects, one of which has been televised.

The ensemble's size ranges from string quartet through ensemble up to full symphony orchestra. The group has a warm and enthusiastic approach to playing music from Bach to Jon Lord pictured below at the world premiere of 'To Notice Such Things' in memory of Sir John Mortimer.

The event will consist of a String programme with Bruce Martin (flute), to include music by John Ireland (minuet from the Downland Suite), Mendelssohn (String Octet) and local film composer Paul Lewis with his "English Suite".
